A NOTE ON CATALOGUE

In the collection of Ismailia Association for Pakistan, Karachi, there are 114 Khojki Manuscripts containing mostly Khojki religious literature called 'Ginans', composed by various Pirs who came to Indo-Pakistan Sub-Continent to preach Ismaili faith to Hindus. These manuscripts contain religious advices mostly, in Sindhi, Hindi, Multani and Gujrati dialects. Manuscripts are generally copied in the script called 'Khojki', which was prevalent among Khojahs. Some of these manuscripts are of 18th Century. But most of the others are of 19th Century and few are of early 20th Century.

A concise catalogue is prepared for the use of the Library of the Ismailia Association for Pakistan. It is lacking in notes, particularly on the origin of the Khojah Community, their Pirs who converted them to Ismaili faith, their script and also on the Ginans that are cited in the Catalogue. Detailed notes are being prepared from these manuscripts. Meanwhile, a reader can refer to W. Ivanow's already published notes in 'Collectanea' (E.J. Brill, Holland 1948).

In the catalogue, a short description of an individual manuscript is given on each page. Dates are generally given in Samvat era (Sankret - 56 years ahead of C.E), which is either the date on which the copyist had begun to copy the manuscript or is the date of completion as specified. There is a typical word 'Tafailo' used which is for contains. It is not possible to give in the catalogue the beginning and ending of each work, as these manuscripts are of different nature. Each contains a number of works by different authors, consequently, it would make the discription very lengthy. More over typing facilities of the script are not available yet. These manuscripts have no title given, so they are identified serially and are being microfilmed in the same order only. A list of works that are cited in the catalogue is given at the back with manuscript numbers.
